ABOUT A SCRANTON BOY.

Arthur Moore Is Winning Fame as a Hockey Player.

The following from the Philadelphia Inquirer's estimate of the crack Quaker City Hockey team will be read with inerest by the many friends of "Art" Moore, who has won such fame as a hockey player since his entrance to the University of Pennsylvania, three years ago:

With a team made up entirely of light, fast players more is required of the goal keeper than would be true of the defense men were heavy and slow, because the light, fast men are always tempted to take a chance at "going up the lee" and trying to score. And while it is true that Phymister, Gorman and Cross have shet more goals than falls to the lot of the ordinary point or cover-point, yet the Quaker's goal has at all times been impervious to attack owing to the fine work of Goal-keeper A. J. Moore. Moore is a native of Scranton, Pa., who played roller pole during the craze for that game some years ago. He is an all around athered lete of more than usual note, playing base ball, foot ball and tennis quite as well as he does hockey. He is possessed of a quick, clear eye, cool head and "barrels of nerve." There is nothing more nerve racking than to have a man get a clear shot at the goal-keeper, but it never seems to phase Moore; he simply brushes the puck to the side of the rink and never even conducted to look relieved. He to even condescends to look relieved. He is fortunate in possessing that cool, equable temperament that stands an athlete in such good stead when called upon to meet unexpected emergencies and on this ac-unexpected emergencies and on this ne-count enjoys the implicit confidence of the team in front of him.

W. A. O'Brien, the manager of the team, is from Wilkes-Barre, Pa. He has played foot ball and base ball on severni of the state teams. Owing to a weak ankle he is now cut of athletics. He has been connected with the Guaker City Hockey team since the club was organ-ized, and his coaching is of material asized, and his coaching is of material as

Although the assassination was a mystery, it is believed to have been inspired if it was not actually accomleft his colleagues and entered the ante-room, where an unknown man immediately plunged a dagger into his heart. The palace guard, hearing his death cry and the fall of his body, immediately rushed to the room and shot the assassin before he could escape.

Although the police continued from investigations for months, they were never able to identify the assassin or asssociate any one else with the crime, but the knowing ones believe he was a ruffian imported from the mountains by the Armenian banker referred to,

These women live in the mountains of Kurdistan, one of the four chief places noted for the manufacture of rugs, or, as the people of the east call them, carpets. Like the Swiss watchmakers, the industry deseends from father to son and from mother to daughter. The making of a rug is often a family affair different members working at different times, each choosing colors according to his own sweet will. This accounts for the difference of design that the owner sometimes deprecates, but which is

The many mistakes in the matching of colors are due to the fact that if the wool runs short the weaver will often replace it with another that looks as
